NIGERIAN-AMERICAN SONGWRITER HONORS FALLEN SERVICEMEN AND WOMEN ON MEMORIAL DAY

Framingham songwriter and healthcare entrepreneur George Akinkuoye (PhD) has just released "Remembering Our Fallen Soldiers," a Memorial Day tribute to American forces who have made the ultimate sacrifice in service to the nation.

The chorus of the four-stanza ballad (below) composed by the Nigerian-born Akinkouye, reflects his deep and abiding gratitude to those who have allowed him and his family to prosper in the U.S., safe in a world besieged by war and terrorism.

George says of the song, which he performs on the enclosed USB flash drive, "It's folk music style with an Afro beat."

"Remembering Our Fallen Soldiers"

(Listen on attached USB flash drive)

Chorus:

Remembering our soldiers, remembering our greatest heroes, who fell in the line of duty so that you and I could be safe. Remembering our soldiers, remembering our greatest heroes, who fell in the line of duty so that you and I could be safe.

Stanzas:

1. As we gather here today, we thank you for your bravery, we thank you for the courage that you gave to your loving country. As we gather here today, we thank you for your bravery, we thank you for the courage that you gave to your loving country.
2. Memorial is the day that we come to say thank you, that we come to pay our tribute for the service you gave us all. Memorial is the day that we come to say thank you, that we come to pay our tribute for the service you gave us all.
3. As the days go by we miss you, we say thank you once again, we thank you for your service that you gave to your loving country. As the days go by we miss you, we say thank you once again, we thank you for the service that you gave to your loving country.
4. Adieu Oh Soldier! Adieu to our greatest heroes, who fell in the line of duty while trying to save you and me. Adieu O' Soldier, Adieu to our greatest heroes, who fell in the line of duty while trying to save you and me.
